
COVID-19 Resilience Update

03.16.2020

As the COVID-19 mitigation recommendations continue to evolve, we at Volpe and Koenig have taken active measures to protect the well-being of our staff, clients and community at large, while ensuring business continuity to service our clients' needs.

Our attorneys and staff began working remotely on Friday, March 13 while our Philadelphia office remains open with a skeleton staff to manage physical operations. Regardless of any preventive measures that may be required by local authorities, we are prepared to do our part while ensuring that the firm remains fully available to our clients. Your calls and emails will be answered and we will continue to represent you with the same responsiveness and level of expertise you have come to expect.

Please note that effective today, March 16, the USPTO offices are closed to the public. However, USPTO employees, contractors, and others with access badges will continue to have access to USPTO facilities; operations will continue normally. Patent and trademark application deadlines and other deadlines are not being extended.
